Cattle Prices Will be Maintained in Arizona--the Stock Outlook in These Parts

The Arizona Stockman says: Cattle outfits are changing hands these days at prices ranging all the way from $14 to $30 around, depending on the kind of cattle, location of range, how badly scared about the future the owner is, and how badly the purchaser wants to buy. While money is temporarily tight and no one knows just "which way the cat will jump," yet there seems to be nothing in present conditions or the outlook to warrant cheap prices for either range or butcher stuff. If the passage of new tariff legislation should depress prices, it will be due to a "scare," manipulation, or some undue outside influence, because the country is really and seriously short on cattle and is bound to continue to for several years. Don't be scared if cattle go down; they'll come up again.

The "Barbed Wire Route" Through Cochise Does Not Meet Favor

The latest Douglas whisper is a reflection on the state administration's work of building the excellent concrete bridge over the San Pedro at Fairbank. For the information of the men who are advocating the "barbed wire route" for the El Paso Phoenix race, we wish to state that the abutment piers on both sides of the river are in at Fairbank and that the engineers in charge of the work in recentment of the Douglas whine, state that the bridge will be done in time to run the great race over.

The logic used by Douglasites for running the great race through by the "barbed wire" link is about as logical as their endeavors to convince the taxpayers that they should feather the nest of certain individuals by bonding the taxpayers of Cochise for half a million to build a "get away" county jail and court house along "in Sonora. It is about as artificial work as trying to shove Hiesle off the map by running the great race via the "barbed wire route." Douglas ought to pitch herself and understand that this is a race over the official state highway and not a novelty race to be run with acrobatic drivers who can hurdle "barbed wire fences" and who wear steel armor vests to keep the points of the "barbed wire" out of their outfit.
